

KING GEORGE'S CONDITION IS WORSE

LOCAL NATIVE HAS PLAN FOR FARM RELIEF

Renick W. Dunlap, Assistant
Secretary of Agriculture,
Explains Ideas.

Renick W. Dunlap, a native of Pickaway-twp, Pickaway-co, now ranking high in the agricultural interests of the government and holding the position as assistant secretary of agriculture, recently in an official welcoming delegates of the National Grange on behalf of the government, gave his prescription for farm relief.

This man, who ranks second on the list of Secretaries of Agriculture, laid stress on two main points which he believes will benefit the farmer. They are: reducing agriculture production by the assistance of the federal government in helping the American farmer to receive a larger portion of the consumers' dollar and the adjustment of taxes.

OUTLINES PROGRAM.

In outlining his relief program, Mr. Dunlap stipulated the following needs:

1. Cease opening new lands for the time being for agricultural purposes, either by taking water off, or putting it on, or in any other way.

2. Encourage through federal appropriations further agricultural research.

3. Discourage corporation farming, or a farming on a large scale, and encourage the establishing of farms which will be of the proper size to operate most successfully and still maintain the independence of the farmer, and also maintain the farm community spirit.

4. Find new uses for agricultural products.

5. Discover, if possible, use for any of the agricultural products which are now wasted.

6. Give more study to the use of commercial fertilizers and other soil applications.

DISEASE PREVENTATIVE.

7. Give more attention to the cure and prevention of diseases among livestock and plants.

8. Furnish better quarantine service to prevent introduction of foreign countries of diseased and infested plants and animals.

9. Give much more attention to study of farm machinery.

10. The federal government should give all the help possible in solving the farmers' marketing problems—not with the idea of relieving the consumer to pay more for his food, but rather with the idea of helping the farmer get a larger portion of the consumers' dollar than he is now receiving.

11. Assist in teaching the farmer to produce more products but produce more economically. The government should preserve the American market for the American farmer. This can be done in one way, by a high tariff.

TAX ADJUSTMENTS

12. Adjust taxes. The farmer now paying more than his share in taxes, and this adjustment can be made with the help of urban citizens.

13. Marginal or submarginal lands upon which people may now be living, endeavoring to eke out existence, might be purchased by the federal government and left idle until additional land is needed to provide food for our people.

14. Relieve forest lands and timber lands, from which no revenue is derived, from taxation. Place a very nominal tax on land until the owner begins to harvest his timber, at which time a proper tax may be collected.

15. Increase internal water transportation facilities, thereby reducing the cost of marketing farm products.

TRIAL REPORT MISTAKE MADE

Judge Curtin Withdraws
After Disagreement Over
Making Up Record.

In reporting the proceedings in the trial of Clark Grabill, of Pickaway-co, who faces a grand larceny indictment, in the Pickaway-co common pleas court Wednesday afternoon, an error was made in assigning the reason for Judge Clarence Curtin withdrawing from the case and the naming of Judge Pope Gregg, of Washington C. H., to preside.

Judge Curtin withdrew as judge in the trial after an affidavit of prejudice was filed with the clerk of courts by the defense attorneys following a disagreement with the court on how the record should be made up.

The affidavit was based on the fact that Judge Curtin did not want them to make the records in the manner Attorney Walters wanted them to be made up. Judge Curtin claimed the records were not facts and Walters contended they were and would make the record that way. Mr. Walters then filed an affidavit of prejudice. Curtin withdrew after having expressed willingness to withdraw before the affidavit was filed.

I. F. Snyder, special assistant to Prosecutor E. A. Brown, had no connection with the argument between Judge Curtin and Attorney Walters, defense attorney, over the manner in which jurors were drawn and excused. The trial will be resumed Monday morning before Judge Gregg.

Although the temperature was far below freezing few frozen radiators were reported as many owners took heed when a cold wave was reported headed for this vicinity.

To many residents this date will bring to them recollections of Nov. 23, 1913. On that day snow was drifted in many places 10 feet. On the level the snow measured about 15 inches, according to reports of Dr. Clarke. The centralized schools were closed, rural postmen were unable to deliver mail and traffic in the county was held up for many days until the wave passed.

Turkey Outrun By Sprinter In Good Old Days

With the coming of Thanksgiving and the hunting season in full swing, the word "turkey" brings to Dr. H. R. Clarke, of Circleville, recollections of the last flock of wild turkeys to make their home in Pickaway-co.

The flock made its home near where Walnut creek empties into the Scioto river in the early seventies, and one old hen was always spared by the hunters to keep the flock going.

An interesting story is told concerning this flock by Dr. Clarke. John Clark, a sprinter, who moved to this county from Pittsburgh caught one of the turkeys alive by running it down, after dogs and chased the gobble for some time. Clark was hunting along the river and heard dogs barking on the opposite bank. He stopped to listen, thinking they had scared up a cottontail but presently saw a large gobble take to the wing headed for the bank near where he was standing. Having only small bird shot in his gun and noticing that when the turkey landed it held its wings out from weakness from running, he took after the gobble and captured it alive.

EX-CHIEF OF CANTON WILL GET OLD JOB

Court Orders Lengel, Mellett
Murder Suspect, Returned
As Head of Police.

(BULLETIN)

CANTON, O., Nov. 23.—S. A. Lengel, one of the principal figures in the Don R. Mellett murder case, who was ordered reinstated today as police chief of Canton, said he will not reassume office until the city has had an opportunity to appeal the reinstatement order. Mayor C. C. Curtis said the city has not decided, as yet, what action will be taken.

CANTON, O., Nov. 23.—Former Police Chief S. A. Lengel, who was one of the principal figures in the investigation of the murder of Don R. Mellett, publisher of the Canton Daily News, was ordered reinstated today by Common Pleas Judge W. M. Stephenson.

Judge Stephenson's order resulted from a writ of mandamus filed by Lengel a year ago, Lengel claiming he was removed from office on "insufficient evidence."

Lengel was tried, convicted and served five months in the state penitentiary in connection with Mellett's death.

Mellett was shot to death in 1926, as the climax of an anti-vice crusade he carried on through the columns of the News. Lengel subsequently was arrested and charged with conspiracy.

Judge Stephenson's order in effect, would permit Lengel to reassume his position immediately. It was understood, however, that Lengel, if reinstated, will resign, his friends declaring he instituted the mandamus action so that he will be eligible to a police pension for the remainder of his life.

Lengel has passed the retirement age and under the court's reinstatement order can claim back pay, retroactive to the date he was removed from office. He also would be entitled to a pension.

Lengel was tried twice. The first jury found him guilty but after serving a short term he was granted a new trial.

The second trial, held at Lisbon, resulted in a directed verdict of not guilty. This was brought about when Floyd Streitenberger, a former member of the police department, refused to reiterate testimony he gave at the first trial.

LOCAL NATIVE HAS PLAN FOR FARM RELIEF

Renick W. Dunlap, Assistant
Secretary of Agriculture,
Explains Ideas.

Renick W. Dunlap, a native of Pickaway-twp, Pickaway-co, now ranking high in the agricultural interests of the government and holding the position as assistant secretary of agriculture, recently in an official welcoming delegates of the National Grange on behalf of the government, gave his prescription for farm relief.

This man, who ranks second only to Secretary Jardine, laid stress on two main points which he believes will benefit the farmer. They are: reducing agriculture production by the assistance of the federal government in helping the American farmer to receive a larger portion of the consumers' dollar and the adjustment of taxes.

OUTLINES PROGRAM.

In outlining his relief program, Mr. Dunlap stipulated the following needs:

1. Cease opening new lands for the time being for agricultural purposes, either by taking water off, or putting it on, or in any other way.
2. Encourage through federal appropriations further agricultural research.
3. Discourage corporation farming, or a farming on a large scale, and encourage the establishing of farms which will be of the proper size to operate most successfully and still maintain the independence of the farmer and also maintain the farm community spirit.
4. Find new uses for agricultural products.
5. Discover, if possible, use for any of the agricultural products which are now wasted.
6. Give more study to the use of commercial fertilizers and other soil applications.

DISEASE PREVENTATIVE.

7. Give more attention to the care and prevention of diseases among livestock and plants.
8. Furnish better quarantine service to prevent introduction of foreign countries of diseased infested plants and animals.
9. Give much more attention to study of farm machinery.
10. The federal government should give all the help possible in solving the farmers' marketing problems—not with the idea of relieving the consumer to pay more for his food, but rather with the idea of helping the farmer get a larger portion of the consumers' dollar than he is now receiving.

TAX ADJUSTMENTS

12. Adjust taxes. The farmer now paying more than his share in taxes, and this adjustment can be made with the help of urban citizens.
13. Marginal or submarginal lands upon which people may now be living, endeavoring to eke out existence, might be purchased by the federal government and set aside for forests, or used for grazing, or left idle until additional land is needed to provide food for our people.
14. Relieve forest lands and other lands, from which no revenue is derived, from taxation, by placing a very nominal tax on the land until the owner begins to harvest his timber, at which time a proper tax may be collected.
15. Increase internal water transportation facilities, thereby reducing the cost of marketing farm products.

Judge Curtain withdrew as judge in the trial after an affidavit of prejudice was filed with the clerk of courts by the defense attorneys following a disagreement with the court on how the record should be made up.

The affidavit was based on the fact that Judge Curtain did not want them to make the records in the manner Attorney Walters wanted them to be made up. Judge Curtain claimed the records were not facts and Walters contended they were and would make the record that way. Mr. Walters then filed an affidavit of prejudice. Upon the filing of the affidavits, Curtain withdrew after having expressed willingness to withdraw before the affidavits were filed.

I. F. Snyder, special assistant to Prosecutor E. A. Brown, had no connection with the argument between Judge Curtain and Barton Walters, defense attorney, over the manner in which jurors were drawn and excused. The trial will be resumed Monday morning before Judge Gregg.

SALE PERMIT ASKED

The trustees of the Camp Grove M. E. church near New Holland, formerly in the West Holland charge, have filed application in the common pleas court for permission to sell the old church property.

Turkey Outrun By Sprinter In Good Old Days

With the coming of Thanksgiving and the hunting season in full swing, the word "turkey" brings to Dr. H. R. Clarke, of Circleville recollections of the last flock of wild turkeys to make their home in Pickaway-co.

The flock made its home near where Walnut creek empties into the Scioto river in the early seventies, and one old hen was always spared by the hunters to keep the flock going.

An interesting story is told concerning this flock by Dr. Clarke. John Clark, a sprinter, who moved to this county from Pittsburgh caught one of the turkeys alive by running it down, after dogs and chased the gobbler for some time. Clark was hunting along the river and heard dogs barking on the opposite bank. He stopped to listen, thinking they had scared up a cottontail but presently saw a large gobbler take to the wing headed for the bank near where he was standing. Having only small bird shot in his gun and noticing that when the turkey landed it held its wings out from weakness from running, he took after the gobbler and captured it alive.

COLD SNAP RECALLS DAY 15 YEARS AGO

Dr. H. R. Clarke, local weather observer, reported the mercury dropped to 25 degrees Thursday night.

Although the temperature was far below freezing few frozen radiators were reported as many owners took heed when a cold wave was reported headed for this vicinity.

To many residents this date will bring to them recollections of Nov. 23, 1913. On that day snow was drifted in many places 10 feet. On the level the snow measured about 15 inches, according to reports of Dr. Clarke. The centralized schools were closed, rural postmen were unable to deliver mail and traffic in the county was held up for many days until the

Court Orders Lengel, Mellett
Murder Suspect, Returned
As Head of Police.

(BULLETIN)

CANTON, O., Nov. 23.—S. A. Lengel, one of the principal figures in the Don R. Mellett murder case, who was ordered reinstated today as police chief of Canton, said he will not reassume office until the city has had an opportunity to appeal the reinstatement order. Mayor C. C. Curtis said the city has not decided, as yet, what action will be taken.

CANTON, O., Nov. 23.—Former Police Chief S. A. Lengel who was one of the principal figures in the investigation of the murder of Don R. Mellett, publisher of the Canton Daily News, was ordered re-instated today by Common Pleas Judge W. M. Stephenson.

Judge Stephenson's order resulted from a writ of mandamus filed by Lengel a year ago, Lengel claiming he was removed from office on "insufficient evidence."

Lengel was tried, convicted and served five months in the state penitentiary in connection with Mellett's death.

Mellett was shot to death in 1926, as the climax of an anti-vice crusade he carried on through the columns of the News. Lengel subsequently was arrested and charged with conspiracy.

PENSION IS SOUGHT
Judge Stephenson's order, in effect, would permit Lengel to reassume his position immediately. It was understood, however, that Lengel, if reinstated, will resign, his friends declaring he instituted the mandamus action so that he will be eligible to a police pension for the remainder of his life.

Lengel has passed the retirement age and under the court's reinstatement order can claim back pay, retroactive to the date he was removed from office. He also would be entitled to a pension.

Lengel was tried twice. The first jury found him guilty but after serving a short term he was granted a new trial.

The second trial, held at Lisbon, resulted in a directed verdict of not guilty. This was brought about when Floyd Streitenberger, a former member of the police department, refused to reiterate testimony he gave at the first trial.

IS 60 YEARS OLD
Streitenberger was convicted and was sentenced to life imprisonment along with Pat McDermott and Ben Rudner. McDermott was charged with being the "trigger man" in the killing.

A fifth man involved, Louis Mazer, turned state's evidence and was sentenced to five to 20 years. Lengel is 60 years old and was within 11 months of retirement on pension when he was ousted on charges of malfeasance in office, neglect of duty and failure to act in bringing Mellett's murderers to justice.

His back pay will aggregate $5,000.

LEARNS FRIEND IS VICTIM OF VESTRIS

A. A. Hoopingarner of The Circleville Herald, received word Friday that a friend of years standing, Sidney S. Koppe, had been lost in the Vestris tragedy. When last seen Mr. Koppe was floating in the water, clinging to a bit of wreckage. He was not picked up by any of the ships which searched the scene of the wreck.

Mr. Koppe was national advertising representative of South American and European newspapers. He was noted as a world traveler, and was on his way to South America at the time of the tragedy. He and Hoopingarner worked together on various newspapers some years ago.

HENCHMEN OF BOSS GUILTY

Fifteen Workers of Morris Eller,
Chicago Politician,
Are Given Fines.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Henchmen of Morris Eller, political boss of the "bloody Twentieth" ward, were found guilty here today of election violence committed during the April state primary.

The verdict required 14 hours deliberation by a jury in Judge John M. O'Connor's criminal court.

Only one defendant, Joseph "Peppi" Genaro, escaped conviction. Genaro was found not guilty on all counts of the indictment returned against him and other Eller aides by a special Cook-co grand jury.

The fifteen men were assessed fines ranging from $400 to $1,250. Eleven fines of $400 were assessed. Morris Eller and his son, Judge Eller, indicted with their aides, were granted separate trials. They now are fighting trial with the defense that their indictment was illegal in that it was returned by a special grand jury when the regular grand jury was in session.

The indictments cited various charges of violence including the primary day murder of Octavius Granady, negro candidate for ward committeeman, and numerous kidnappings, sluggings, and vote frauds.

Twenty Millions Is Death Tax on Whitney's Estate

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Accustomed to seven and eight figures after the dollar signs of its millionaires, the nation today contemplated with something akin to awe the largest estate ever appraised in this country.

The estate belonged to Payne Whitney, capitalist and sportsman, who died suddenly May 25, 1927, and its appraised net value published yesterday was $178,893,655.

The largest death tax ever paid will come from the estate, $20,000,000 in all.

The larger portion of the Whitney estate consisted of 50,000 shares—a half interest in the Northern Finance Corporation, a holding company for securities in which Whitney's half was valued at $125,521,612.

CHARGES FIREMEN QUIT THEIR POSTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—John S. Adams, chief engineer of the Vestris, charged today that firemen left their post of duty at 10:30 a. m. on the Monday the Vestris went down.

He told the hearing before officials of the Commerce Department that officers of the Vestris had to take the firemen's posts. The officers were able to work in the engine room only about 30 minutes as the water was coming in at such a rate as to make further work impossible.

"The firemen refused to remain at their posts because they were so frightened," Adams said.

He said that refusal of the firemen to continue stoking and inability of the officers to go on with the work made it impossible for him to keep up steam.

DUKE OF YORK GOES BACK TO ILL MONARCH

Son Returns When Cold and Fever Spread To Lungs of British Ruler.

(BULLETIN)

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Duke of York, second son of the king, returned to London today from Northampton to be near the bedside of his father, who is ill with a severe cold and congestion of the lungs.

The Duke left London last night to join the Duchess of York and the baby, Princess Elizabeth at Naseby hall.

About noon, Lord Dawson of Penn, physician in ordinary to the king and Sir Stanley Hewett, surgeon apothecary to the king, issued a bulletin indicating that the king's illness had taken a turn for the worse. The trend of the king's condition was described as a "slight extension of the mischief in the king's lungs."

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Anxiety gripped millions of Britons in a vast empire today because a gray-bearded man lay ill of a cold in a big stone mansion in London.

The man was George V. king. His cold was merely one such as many of these subjects had experienced, yet since he was monarch his case seemed different.

Before the stone mansion, Buckingham palace, scores of citizens lingered. Guards tried to keep them moving. When a fresh guard was mounted, in all its trappings, at 11 a. m., the bright music of its band was lacking.

Within the palace, doctors came and went—doctors with imposing titles like physician-in-ordinary and surgeon-and-apothecary-to-the-king. These men, Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett, respectively, announced in their last bulletin that the sovereign had contracted a slight congestion in one lung and had some fever.

A third physician had been called in for consultation about midnight.

There was no especial alarm in the royal household itself.

The Duke of York left last night to rejoin the Duchess of York and Princess Elizabeth at Naseby Hall, Northamptonshire. The Earl and Countess of Athlone dined with Queen Mary in the palace last night and left for Southampton to sail for South Africa. With them when they departed were Lady May Cambridge and Princess Sibyle of Saxe-Coburg Gotha.

PRINCE IS HUNTING

And in that same Africa toward which they sped, was a young man, beloved of the empire's subjects—the Prince of Wales, who would become king in event of his father's death.

The prince has been hunting in the dark continent. Word today said he arrived at Dodome Center, a white settlement in the Yangiyanian highlands. The whole countryside enthusiastically welcomed him. Natives in magnificent dress formed a spectacular gathering as Wales received an address of welcome. From Dodome Center the prince, apparently unimpaired of the bare chance that he soon might be called to the throne, planned to proceed to Rhodesia, by way of Lake Tanganyika.

Unofficial overnight reports said that the king had rested very comfortably, and prominent physicians throughout the city, commenting on the bulletins issued at the palace by the physicians, expressed opinions that there seemed to be no reason why the king's indisposition should not run a normal course followed by early and complete recovery.

TREATMENT OF NEW KONJOLA BANISHED STOMACH TROUBLE

States That Master Medicine Proved To Be of Exceptional Merit In His Case.

MR. MILTON MATHEWS.
"Konjola proved to be a medicine of real merit in my case and it restored my health after all else failed so that is my reason for making this public endorsement," said Mr. Milton Mathews, R. F. D. No. 5, Xenia, Ohio.
"I am seventy-four years old and at that age I did not think I had a chance to ever get rid of any stomach trouble. I lost my appetite and became undernourished and weakened. Belching, gas, bloating, and indigestion pains came over me just as soon as I finished eating. I was always tired and lacked the ambition to accomplish anything. In fact, life was just a steady round of suffering.
"Someone recommended Konjola and I made up my mind to give it a trial. No one will ever know how wonderfully this medicine helped me. At my age when one remedy can banish every trace of stomach trouble, you know it must have unusual merit. Konjola relieved the stomach trouble so that all symptoms are permanently ended. I am filled with energy and vigor and have been benefited in every way."
Konjola is sold in Circleville, O., at Mykrantz Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in every town.

Farm News

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—In the light of statistics collected so far, 1927 does not compare favorably with 1926 from the standpoint of agricultural production in Ohio.

Decreases appear in the total acreage of crops in the average yield per acre and in the gross production. This is not true of each crop, however, according to figures compiled by G. S. Ray and T. F. McDonough, Jr., agricultural statisticians for the United States department of agriculture, and E. J. Hopkins of the staff of the rural economics department of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station.

Total combined acreage of corn, wheat, oats, hay and potatoes in Ohio, according to these figures, was nearly 10,500,000 in 1926 and dropped 2.6 per cent in 1927. Acre yields for these crops decreased 3.94 per cent in 1927, while gross productions of these crops was reduced 21.7 per cent.

All these decreases occurred in corn, wheat and oats, however. They were severe enough to more than counter-balance increases in hay and potatoes.

Corn acreage dropped 6 per cent, acre yield 20.8 per cent and gross production 25.5 per cent. Wheat acreage dropped 10 per cent, acre yield 20 per cent, and total crop 28.9 per cent. Acreage of oats decreased 4.1 per cent, acre yield 15.8 per cent and total production 19.2 per cent.

Contrary to conditions, this year hay did well in 1927. Acreage was increased 6.8 per cent, over that of 1926. Acre yield was 1.64 tons to the acre as compared with 1.37 for 1926, a gain of 12.4 per cent. The total production was 27.6 per cent greater than that of 1926. Potatoes also showed improvement over the 1926 crop. Acreage increased 8.4 per cent and the acre yield was 11.7 per cent more. The total crop was 21 per cent greater for the state. Further increases in acreage and yield have been tentatively reported for this year.

Production figures are based on reports for the entire state during the crop season of 1927. All crops harvested in Ohio in 1927 were valued at $241,506,000 on a basis of the price on Dec. 1.

Unusually as they may be, the brown and sere tops, and stems of the perennials which ornamented the garden last summer should be left as they are until they have thoroughly ripened.

Victor H. Ries, specialist in floriculture at Ohio State university, recommends that they be not disturbed until the latter part of November or early December.

The announcement of their forthcoming marriage was first intimated that Barrymore had been divorced from his second wife, the former Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, whose pen name is "Michael Strange."

Large Horse

The largest horse ever known is said to be the Equus giganicus, the skeleton of which was found in Texas in 1903. From the animal's teeth it was estimated that the horse would have measured 18 hands. The weight was not estimated. A percheron horse in France was known to be 17 1/2 hands and weighed over 2,200 pounds.

TREATMENT OF NEW KONJOLA BANISHED STOMACH TROUBLE

States That Master Medicine Proved To Be of Exceptional Merit In His Case.

MR. MILTON MATHEWS.

"Konjola proved to be a medicine of real merit in my case and it restored my health after all else failed so that my reason for making this public indorsement," said Mr. Milton Mathews, R. F. D. No. 5, Xenia, Ohio.

"I am seventy-four years old and at that age I did not think I had a chance to ever get rid of any stomach trouble. I lost my appetite and became undernourished and weakened. Belching spells, gas bloating, and indigestion pains came over me just as soon as I finished eating. I was always tired and lacked the ambition to accomplish anything. In fact, life was just a steady round of suffering.

"Someone recommended Konjola and I made up my mind to give it a trial. No one will ever know how wonderfully this medicine helped me. At my age when one remedy can banish every trace of stomach trouble, you know it must have unusual merit. Konjola relieved the stomach trouble so that all symptoms are permanently ended. I am filled with energy and vigor and have been benefited in every way."

Konjola is sold in Circleville, O., at Mykrantz Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in every town

Farm News

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—In the light of statistics collected so far, 1927 does not compare favorably with 1926 from the standpoint of agricultural production in Ohio.

Decreases appear in the total acreage of crops in the average yield per acre and in the gross production. This is not true of each crop, however, according to figures compiled by G. S. Ray and T. F. McDonough, Jr., agricultural statisticians for the United States department of agriculture, and E. J. Hopkins of the staff of the rural economics department of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station.

Total combined acreage of corn, wheat, oats, hay and potatoes in Ohio, according to these figures, was nearly 10,500,000 in 1926 and dropped 2.6 per cent in 1927. Acre yields for these crops decreased 3.94 per cent in 1927, while gross productions of these crops was reduced 21.7 per cent.

All these decreases occurred in corn, wheat and oats, however. They were severe enough to more than counter-balance increases in hay and potatoes.

Corn acreage dropped 6 per cent acre yield 20.8 per cent and gross production 25.5 per cent. Wheat acreage dropped 10 per cent acre yield 20 per cent, and total crop 28.9 per cent. Acreage of oats decreased 4.1 per cent, acre yield 15.8 per cent and total production 19.2 per cent.

Contrary to conditions this year hay did well in 1927. Acreage was increased 6.8 per cent over that of 1926. Acre yield was 1.64 tons to the acre as compared with 1.37 for 1926, a gain of 12.4 per cent. The total production was 27.6 per cent greater than that of 1926.

Potatoes also showed improvement over the 1926 crop. Acreage increased 8.4 per cent and the acre yield was 11.7 per cent more. The total crop was 21 per cent greater for the state. Further increases in acreage and yield have been tentatively reported for this year.

Production figures are based on reports for the entire state during the crop season of 1927. All crops harvested in Ohio in 1927 were valued at $241,506,000 on a basis of the price on Dec. 1.

Unusually as they may be, the brown and sere tops and stems of the perennials which ornamented the garden last summer should be left as they are until they have thoroughly ripened.

Victor H. Ries, specialist in floriculture at Ohio State university, recommends that they be not disturbed until the latter part of November or early December.

Seventeen out of 100 children are from the first decidedly right handed. This test was made recently by handling flashy articles which would take the eye of a new born and seeing which hand he used.

Keep youth longer!

cleanse the system of poisons

Two of the great enemies to youth and vitality are delayed elimination and intestinal poisons. To keep yourself free from both these common difficulties will help you to stay young.

With the use of Nujol you can do it too. For Nujol absorbs body poisons and carries them off, preventing their absorption by the body. Nujol also softens the waste matter and brings about normal evacuation. It is harmless; contains no drugs or medicine. It won't cause gas or griping pains, or affect the stomach or kidneys. Every corner druggist has Nujol. Make sure you get the genuine. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle. Don't delay, get Nujol today.

Homework of Pupils Called Immoral Plan

Alabama Educator Opposed To Lessons Out of School Hours.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 20.—Homework assignments for school children are immoral, Mrs. Marietta Johnson, founder of a kindergarten-to-college school at Fairhope, Ala., said in an address before the New Orleans Child Conference here. Mrs. Johnson's school has no grades, no examinations and no assigned lessons, but graduates have entered 20 standard colleges and none has failed. Mrs. Johnson said, "All the standard schools do is get children ready—get first graders ready for the second grade; get each grade ready for the next; get graduates ready for something else. They want to guarantee he will be ready for something—and that is the business of a quack. That is partly the result of religion, partly the result of our industrial system.

"At our school we say instead that it is just as important to be four as it is to be 40, and there's no use getting ready for 40 when you're four. So all we do is meet the needs of the child, as an organism, at his present age.

"The time to learn is when you need to know. So, though we do give examinations—which everybody passes—in high school, we teach the children then what they need to know. If ever there is a time to know the multiplication table, it is when you need it for an examination problem. That is when we tell it to the children.

It is normal for a child to come from school and forget his lessons until he goes to bed. If he has an assignment, he has to lose his sleep to get it, or have his mother get it—and he gets scolded if his mother gets it wrong. Therefore the fault is with the assignment. It starts a wrong movement, and anything that starts a wrong movement is immoral.

"The problem of the school is not to make the child meet its standards but to meet the standards of the child's needs.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Once winter comes, spring is surely not far behind. With more than the usual amount of Eve's curiosity, women begin peering around corners to get a glimpse of the lovely things being prepared for Florida, California and of course Havana, regarded by many as the mecca of fashionables this winter.

Spring comes first to the shop windows and beckons shivering mortals with frosted noses pressed against the pane. It somehow warms the cockles of one's heart to find linens again being so charmingly shown.

They will undoubtedly achieve increased prominence at southern resorts this winter. Handkerchief linen which first made its debut about a year ago is considered of foremost importance, and will be identified not only with the ensemble mode but also in the guise of blouses accompanying lightweight woolen costumes. It is featured in modernistic prints and a large variety of plain shades. French designers are also showing Jacquard patterns on the sheer qualities.

Brocade effects on linens strike the newest note and appear on the heavier weight in borders, for coats, while more discreet designs are found on the satin-finished qualities for dresses. Monotones will be seen in greater numbers and will generally subscribe to the combination thought of colors, either joining several shades of one color or contrasting tones in a modernistic effect.

Among the interesting sports linen novelties launched for resort wear is a knitted open mesh developed from highly mercerized imported yarns. It is shown in creamy white and colors and is particularly suited to blouse interpretations as well as frocks of sports genre.

FIRE BUG INSANE.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—H. Eugene Sawyer, 18, formerly of Madison, Wis., has been indicted on charges of arson in connection with the firing of a local church. He has been found insane and will be committed to the state hospital at Lima, officials said.

When Metal Gets Tired

A metal gets tired and needs a rest the same as does an animal, declares Prof. J. D. Kommers, expert of metal fatigue at the University of Wisconsin. When an axle breaks or an automobile wheel drops off without apparent cause, the reason usually is that the metal was fatigued and needed a rest and didn't get it. There is no way of preventing this fatigue, says Popular Science Monthly, except by resting the metal.

I like to play the game of bridge,
And find it pleasant sport,
Now that the nights are growing long

Now that the days are short,
As card games go I think it is

This stray thought comes to me—
I do not like the cheap advice
So wild and full and free,

Just wince and let me be.

For all your codfish helpfulness
Come when the deed is o'er,
Comes after I have lost the trick,
It's gone forevermore—
It's done and gone and over with,
So why let out a roar?

Don't tell me that I played 'em high
Instead of playing low,
If I have lost the pain is mine,
Also the grief and woe.
It makes me long to turn and tell
You just where you may go.

BIBLE THOUGHT

STAND TOGETHER — He (God) is near that justifieth me; who will contend with me? let us stand together: who is mine adversary? let him come near to me. —Isa. 50:8.

WAR'S FONDISH CRUELTY

Many of the Armistice day sermons dealt with the revolting cruelty of war. The pastors spoke of the absolute incompatibility of the savage and merciless acts of war, with the love and humanity taught by the Christian religion. Unless the so-called Christians wish to go entirely back on their Master, they must abandon these revolting wars.

If Jesus Christ were here today He would visit the institution of war with the most bitter condemnation. He would not blame a nation that was attacked from acting in self defense, but He would say that all nations must consent to peaceful settlement of their quarrels.

HOOVER AND HIS GUARDS

Already, Herbert Hoover has had a taste of the loss of personal freedom that goes with election to the presidency of the nation.

On the day after election he found his Palo Alto home guarded by several unobtrusive, capable looking men in civilian clothes. These men will watch over him until he finishes his time in the White House. They are secret service operatives, charged with the safety of the president, and in recent years it has been decreed that the president-elect also must have their protection.

A number of our presidents, notably Roosevelt and Harding, grew tired of the eternal vigilance and delighted to outwit their guards. But the surveillance is necessary, for all that. Mr. Hoover cannot escape it. It is one of the prices he must pay for his election.

CALMING DOWN.

One of the problems before the American people now, is how to calm down the excited feelings of the recent election. Of course the people always quiet down a lot in a few days after election, and the majority of them forget what it is all about. Those who are defeated lose sight of the direful prophecies they made, and conclude that things will go on about as usual.

While great and vital issues were at stake in this election, many needlessly bitter things were said, and people went too far in the expression of their convictions. Some old sores that should be healed were reopened.

The time has now come to forget harsh things that were said, and for people to realize that their opponents are their friends and well wishers, and that all elements are unanimous in a desire for public welfare and the success of our country. We need more co-operation and harmony, and political bitterness gets us nowhere.

THE RED MAN VOTES.

An Oklahoma dispatch reports that many Indians voted for the first time Nov. 6. The American people welcome their interest in citizenship. They are the first Americans. They owned these rich soils when our ancestors came over here as aliens and immigrants. We drove them out of their fertile fields.

The Indian brethren can hardly claim that they should have retained a soil that they could not or would not cultivate. Still the country feels that it owes the red man something, and it hopes he will be able to adapt himself to the white man's civilization. The old Indians, with all their faults, had a most heroic fortitude, and they were very keen observers. People who have these qualities should make good in the white man's country, if they can have the white man's education.

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, star reporter on a large newspaper, covers a garden fête given by Spencer Hayden, a millionaire. There he meets Ann, a beautiful, debauche daughter of a wealthy banker, who is engaged to marry Hector Richards, whom she does not love. She becomes interested in Dunn, who is different from the men she has always known, and when he asks her to direct him to Mr. Hayden, she pretends she is a poor girl who has crashed the party. They leave the party and sit talking on a bench nearby. Dunn rails against the idle rich and his ideas stir Ann. She confesses that she belongs to the class he hates. Dunn is shocked, but admits if they belonged to the same social group he could fall in love with her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI.

JERRY DUNN'S scoffing at her society friends did not arouse in her any resentment against him. All that he said about them was true, except in a few isolated cases. Dunn, she recognized, was mentally their superior. It was his mind that attracted her to him; he stimulated her, challenged her, like a cold raw wind.

But her interest in him seemed to be entirely mental. He had said that she "clicked" with him, that but for her emmeshment in social life he could easily be crazy about her. No similar feeling for him, however, stirred in her breast. Because he was different from the men of her crowd he did possess a certain glamorous interest, but there was not the faintest throb of any electric symptom of a crush. If he had any personal—physical—magnetism it had not registered, so far.

"I know what you say is true," she told him. "The life I lead is all silk and velvet and each year I'll sink deeper and deeper into the softness. I'd like to escape the empty laziness of it all, but what can I do? It's too cheap and common to go hunting thrills, just from boredom. And why should I take a job and work to earn a little money when I already have enough money? I think also I ought to consider the feelings of my parents—what's the good shocking them and hurting them? No—it looks like I'm trapped."

Jerry ignored surface politeness. "Maybe, you don't get out of it because there's something soft inside you. Maybe you're a born parasite. In that case it doesn't matter. You can't claim any credit for a few feeble glimmers of dissatisfaction."

Ann felt her face start to tingle. She was not used to criticism. Between them a wall was beginning to rise.

"I think," she said, with a tinge of coldness, "I'll go back with the rest of the parasites. This has been very pleasant and you've been very frank, Mr. Dunn."

She rose and Jerry walked with her the short distance back to the Spencer Hayden's gate. Her slight coolness reached him.

"The quickest way to lose a friend," he said, "is to discover something not flattering — and speak of it. I've offended you, haven't I?"

"By telling me the truth?" Ann laughed a little. "Not at all. Nevertheless she was hurt."

"Before we tell each other goodbye," Jerry said slowly, "I want to say this: I think you're a darn fine girl and maybe some day you'll need a friend. Most people do, some time or other. If there's ever anything I can do for you I wish you'd let me know. Promise?"

Ann promised and they parted with a brief clasp of the hands. He had not asked to see her again and she admired him because he disdained, unlike most males, to take up the eternal pursuit.

As she passed through the side gate and re-entered the grounds it was symbolic; she was going back to everything that engulfed her. With Jerry Dunn for a few minutes she had sniffed freedom, but she hadn't known how to accept it and he hadn't been able to show her.

Back to the company of Hector Richards, the nice, dull boy she was engaged to marry. She came upon him standing a little apart from the audience watching the Shakespearean pageant; several other young chaps were chatting with him, and, apparently, he hadn't noticed her absence.

She stood in the shadow of a tree and looked at him, wondering why she didn't love him. He was comely, slender, a young bachelor with good features and a contented eye. About Jerry Dunn had been the suggestion of something haggard, but Hector was as self-sufficient as a banker—which was what he was. Both their fathers were bank presidents and their businesses interlocked. Hector loved her, of course; but he was very, very sure of her. And

FASHIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 — The horse still demands the homage of smart attire. Wherever two or three are gathered together in the interest of racing or of exhibiting horses, there is bound to be displayed the latest fashion. When the United Hunts held their last meet the gallery was turned out in thoroughbred style with colorful tweeds heading the field and with Wombat coats the newest sports coat entry.

The flattering grey coloring peculiar to this sports fur is largely responsible for its immediate success at all outdoor gatherings and that it is neutral enough to run tandem makes it a general favorite. The Johnny collar with or without bowknot was a winner at this meet. The formal coat gave prominence to black broadtail and caracul, trimmed with sable or plain. The attached collar, with a feeling for revers contributes a new note, replacing the scarf type

UNIQUE WILLS USUALLY GET LARGE FEES

LONDON, Nov. 23.—People who make curious provisions in their wills, give a lot of trouble to their executors, but also give a lot of money to lawyers, according to legal circles here.

The discussion on eccentric wills arose over a clause in a will creating a trust which was to continue until 20 years after the death of the last survivor of the lineal descendants of Queen Victoria living at the time of the testator's death. The will recently was the subject of litigation in the High Court here.

Among other recent peculiar wills was that of the Yorkshire gardener who bequeathed one shilling and a cracker bowl to his wife.

Another man left his wife five shillings, approximately $1.25, to buy a rope with which to hang herself. He left his son five pounds (about $20) "with which to go to the devil."

The type of will which has for its object the discomfiture of the testator's relations is often provided in "England," but in other countries such legacies are illegal.

Brewery to Ministers.
A testator in Toronto a few years ago put a number of Methodist ministers into an extraordinary dilemma. Staunch prohibitionists, they were rather embarrassed by a large brewery concern which was left them. The same man also left to three important opponents of racing in Canada shares in the Ontario Jockey club, the legatees being requested to draw dividends and exercise the other privileges of membership.

There is a record of a testator writing his will on a door, another on a petticoat.

A British sailor treated his wife somewhat shabbily when he requested his executors to pay her one shilling to buy hazel nuts, "as she has always preferred cracking nuts to mending my socks."

Prefers to Talk.
Perhaps the worst of this kind of provision was that of a London publican who, in revenge, stipulated that his wife, to get the property, must walk barefooted to the market on each anniversary of his death and read a confession that if her tongue had been shorter her husband's life would have been longer. This she refused to do and received only an alternative bequest of $100.

While eccentric wills frequently incense relatives, they are good for the lawyers. Often a large proportion of the estate goes in lawyer's fees.

How to Play BRIDGE

ARTICLE No. 13

Good deductive bidding is very rare, not only because it is not an easy proposition but also because the opportunity seldom arises. Here is a hand in which the dealer had his opportunity and took advantage of it:

Hearts—A, 4
Clubs—A, K, Q, J, 7, 8
Diamonds—10, 9
Spades—J, 10, 7

Y: A B
Z: Z

Hearts—K, J, 9
Clubs—9, 4
Diamonds—K, J, 9, 7, 4, 2
Spades—Q, 4

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed. Y bid one club. B bid one spade and Z bid two diamonds. A bid two hearts; Y bid three clubs and B passed. What should Z now bid?

This is the problem Z had to solve and the correct solution depended on proper deductions from the bidding:

Problem No. 16
Hearts—Q, 8, 7, 5
Clubs—A, K, Q
Diamonds—4
Spades—none

Hearts—K, 6, 4, 2
Clubs—none
Diamonds—J, 10
Spades—9, 8

Hearts—A, 10, 9
Clubs—6, 5
Diamonds—6
Spades—K, 5

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win six of the eight tricks against any defense? Solution in next article.

Here is a good problem in the bidding of slams at Contract:

Problem No. 17

Hearts—Q, 6, 2
Clubs—J, 7, 5
Diamonds—A, Q, 8
Spades—A, Q, 9, 8, 2

Y: A B
Z: Z

Answer to Problem No. 15

Hearts—none
Clubs—6, 5
Diamonds—7, 4
Spades—9, 7, 6, 3

Hearts—K, Q, J
Clubs—A, K, Q, J
Diamonds—A, J, 10, 9
Spades—none

Hearts—A, 10, 7, 3
Clubs—A, 4
Diamonds—K, 5
Spades—none

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the trey of hearts and trump in Y's hand with the trey of spades. Y should now lead the nine of spades. B must discard. He cannot discard a heart or Z, with two re-entries, can establish his hearts. B must, therefore, discard either a club or a diamond. It is really immaterial for no matter which of these two suits B discards Z will discard the same suit and the result will be the same in either case. As A has more strength in diamonds than in clubs, suppose B, at trick two, discards the trey of diamonds. Z should then discard the ace of diamonds. A should discard the nine of diamonds. If B had discarded a club at trick two, Z should have discarded the four of clubs.

At trick three Y should lead the suit B discarded, which we have assumed to be diamonds. Z wins this trick with the king of diamonds. Z should then lead his ace of hearts. A is forced to discard. His best discard is the five of diamonds. Y should discard the five of clubs. Z should then lead the trey of hearts. A should discard the jack of clubs and Y should trump with the six of spades.

Y should now lead the seven of spades, his last trump. A is forced to discard. He cannot discard the queen of hearts or Z's ten of hearts will be good. He is thus forced to discard the seven of clubs. Z should discard the ten of hearts. A is now forced to discard. If he discards his last diamond, Y's seven of diamonds is good. If he discards the queen of clubs, both of Z's clubs are good. It is apparent, therefore, that irrespective of the card A elects to discard at the sixth trick, Y Z must win the balance of the tricks. It is a clever little problem and full of pitfalls for the unwary. After you have mastered this solution, try out the variation, discarding the seven of clubs from B's hand at trick two, instead of the trey of diamonds.

SEE DIN AND LAUGH
There are many features which can not be overlooked in reviewing Richard Dix's new farce comedy "Easy Come, Easy Go," but chiefly the picture is remarkable for its entertainment value. At the Metropolitan theater tonight "Easy Come, Easy Go" has a wide humorous appeal and is easily one of the best, if not the best, of Richard Dix's pictures.

Its humor, as in so many of the Dix farce comedies, is based entirely on the sympathy theme. It portrays the struggles of a clean-cut young American thoroughly honest and capable, but unfortunately, and his embarrassing experience with a wily, but good-natured crook, who gets him into a great deal of trouble from which his own ingenuity, alone, extricates him.

Nancy Carroll, Dix's new leading woman, who made an outstanding success in the Paramount picture of Anne Nichols "Abie's Irish Rose," adds new laurels to her crown by her work in "Easy Come, Easy Go." She gives every evidence of becoming one of Paramount's favored stars.

Christmas Stocking To Hold Endless Variety This Year.

By FRANCES PAGET
(Copyright, 1928 by Women's Wear Magazine.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Given a full purse, it should be a comparatively simple, certainly a fascinating matter, to do one's Christmas shopping. The shops offer all manner of temptations at all manner of costs.

There are so many things—usually seen, such as the choice of a fur set or the gift of a fur for we are to "wear" to use them again, even the possibility of hair ornaments of one sort or another and the endless array of jewelry novelties.

Everything seems to have been slipped in the rainbow. Whatever the plans of the weather man, it will certainly not be a "white Christmas." True pearls and crystals add their sparkle to the scene but there are jeweled novelties as red as the holly or as green as its leaves. One has a feeling somehow that this will not be a year of useful giving, but one which will be characterized by the gift of beauty and frivolity. There are endless enamel trinkets. There are lighters and cigarette cases, holders and all manner of smoking kits as "ladylike" as they were once essentially masculine. There are walking sticks, too, and cuff links and belts through the mode is at its most feminine.

Amusing jewelry novelties fashioned of ermine tails contribute an element of surprise and "She" will not be outraged this Christmas if your jewelry gift is valueless judged by any standard other than style.

FAILURE RECEIPT GIVEN IN SERMON

Attention Is Called To Lot's Example By Presbyterian Evangelist.

"If I were to give a recipe for failure it would be in the two words—He lingered."

Using the story of Lot fleeing from Sodom as his text Dr. Clyde R. Wheeland Thursday night preached a searching sermon on "The Cost of Indecision," at the Presbyterian church.

"So many people want to get a little more tingle out of life before they decide for religion," he said. "The sensitive reception of the soul loses its power to respond. It gets touched until it is touched to death. We destroy not only our own happiness but the happiness of our families."

Friday night Dr. Wheeland will preach again. Sunday afternoon there will be another meeting for men only to which all the men of the community are invited.

At the Metropolitan theater tonight "Easy Come, Easy Go" has a wide humorous appeal and is easily one of the best, if not the best, of Richard Dix's pictures.

Its humor, as in so many of the Dix farce comedies, is based entirely on the sympathy theme. It portrays the struggles of a clean-cut young American thoroughly honest and capable, but unfortunately, and his embarrassing experience with a wily, but good-natured crook, who gets him into a great deal of trouble from which his own ingenuity, alone, extricates him.

Nancy Carroll, Dix's new leading woman, who made an outstanding success in the Paramount picture of Anne Nichols "Abie's Irish Rose," adds new laurels to her crown by her work in "Easy Come, Easy Go." She gives every evidence of becoming one of Paramount's favored stars.

UNIQUE WILLS USUALLY GET LARGE FEES

Many Eccentric Clauses—Man Left Wife Rope To Hang Himself.

LONDON, Nov. 23—People who make curious provisions in their wills, give a lot of trouble to their beneficiaries, but also give a lot of money to lawyers, according to legal circles here.

The discussion on eccentric wills rose over a clause in a will creating a trust which was to continue until 20 years after the death of the last survivor of the lineal descendants of Queen Victoria living at the time of the testator's death. The will recently was the subject of litigation in the High Court here.

Among other recent peculiar wills was that of the Yorkshire gardener who bequeathed one shilling and a cracker bowl to his wife.

Another man left his wife five shillings, approximately $1.25 to buy a rope with which to hang herself. He left his son five pounds (about $20) "with which to go to the devil."

The type of will which has for its object the disfigurement of the testator's relations is often provided in England, but in other countries such legacies are illegal.

Brewery to Ministers.
A testator in Toronto a few years ago put a number of Methodist ministers into an extraordinary dilemma. Staunch prohibitionists, they were rather embarrassed by a large brewery concern which was left them. The same man also left to three important opponents of racing in Canada shares in the Ontario Jockey club, the legatees being requested to draw dividends and exercise the other privileges of membership.

There is a record of a testator writing his will on a door, another on a petticoat.

A British sailor treated his wife somewhat shabbily when he requested his executors to pay her one shilling to buy hazel nuts, "as she has always preferred cracking nuts to mending my socks."

Prefers to Talk.

Perhaps the worst of this kind of provision was that of a London publican who, in revenge, stipulated that his wife, to get the property, must walk barefooted to the market on each anniversary of his death and read a confession that if her tongue had been shorter her husband's life would have been longer. This she refused to do and received only an alternative bequest of $100.

While eccentric wills frequently incense relatives, they are good for the lawyers. Often a large proportion of the estate goes in lawyer's fees.

ARTICLE No. 13

Good deductive bidding is very rare, not only because it is not an easy proposition but also because the opportunities seldom arise. There is a hand in which the dealer has his opportunity and room, advantage of it:

Spades—Q, 4

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed, Y bid one club, B bid one spade and Z bid two diamonds. A bid two hearts; Y bid three clubs and B passed. What should Z now bid?

This is the problem Z had to solve and the correct solution depended on proper deductions from the bidding:

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y win six of the eight tricks against any defense? Solution in next article.

Here is a good problem in the bidding of slams at Contract:

Hearts—Q, 6, 5, 4
Clubs—10, 7
Diamonds—8, 3
Spades—none

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y win all the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the trey of hearts and trump in Y's hand with the trey of spades. Y should now lead the nine of spades. B must discard. He cannot discard a heart or Z, with two re-entries, can establish his hearts. B must, therefore, discard either a club or a diamond. It is really immaterial for no matter which of these two suits B discards Z will discard the same suit and the result is the same in either case. As A has more strength in diamonds than in clubs, suppose B, at trick two, discards the trey of diamonds. Z should then discard the ace of diamonds. A should discard the nine of diamonds. If B had discarded a club at trick two, Z should have discarded the four of clubs.

At trick three Y should lead the suit B discarded, which we have assumed to be diamonds. Z wins this trick with the king of diamonds. Z should then lead his ace of hearts. A is forced to discard. His best discard is the jack of diamonds. Y should discard the five of clubs. Z should then lead the seven of hearts. A should discard the jack of clubs and Y should trump with the six of spades. Y should now lead the seven of spades, his last trump. A is forced to discard. He cannot discard the queen of hearts or Z's ten of hearts will be good. He is thus forced to discard the seven of clubs. Z should discard the ten of hearts. A is now forced to discard. If he discards his last diamond, Y's seven of diamonds is good. If he discards the queen of clubs, both of Z's clubs are good. It is apparent, therefore, that irrespective of the card A elects to discard at the sixth trick, Y must win the balance of the tricks. It is a clever little problem and full of pitfalls for the unwary. After you have mastered this solution, try out the variation, discarding the seven of clubs from B's hand at trick two, instead of the trey of diamonds.

Christmas Stocking To Hold
Endless Variety This Year.

By FRANCES PAGET

(Copyright, 1928 by Women's Wear Magazine.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 23— Given a full purse, it should be a comparatively simple, certainly a fascinating matter, to do one's Christmas shopping. The shops offer all manner of temptations at all manner of costs.

There are so many things not usually seen, such as the choice of a fur set or the gift of a fan for we are to "earn" to use them again, even the possibility of hair ornaments of one sort or another and the endless array of jewelry novelties.

Everything seems to have been dipped in the rainbow. Whatever the plans of the weather man, it will certainly not be a "white Christmas." True pearls and crystals add their sparkle to the scene but there are jeweled novelties as red as the holly or as green as its leaves. One has a feeling somehow that this will not be a year of useful giving, but one which will be characterized by the gift of beauty and frivolity. There are endless enamel trinkets. There are lighters and cigarette cases, holders and all manner of smoking kits as "ladylike" as they were once essentially masculine. There are walking sticks, too, and cuff links and belts through the mode is at its most feminine.

Amusing jewelry novelties fashioned of ermine tails contribute an element of surprise and "She" will not be outraged this Christmas if your jewelry gift is valueless judged by any standard other than style.

FAILURE RECEIPT GIVEN IN SERMON

Attention Is Called To Lot's Example By Presbyterian Evangelist.

"If I were to give a recipe for failure it would be in the two words—He lingered."

Using the story of Lot fleeing from Sodom as his text Dr. Clyde R. Wheeland Thursday night preached a searching sermon on "The Cost of Indecision," at the Presbyterian church.

"So many people want to get a little more tingle out of life before they decide for religion," he said. "The sensitive reception of the soul loses its power to respond. It gets touched until it is touched to death. We destroy not only our own happiness but the happiness of our families."

Friday night Dr. Wheeland will preach again. Sunday afternoon there will be another meeting for men only to which all the men of the community are invited.

Ohio State Can Win Title Only By Miracle

COACH WILCE IS READY FOR FINAL GAME

Eight Players and Mentor Make "Last Tackles" At Practice Ceremony.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—Dr. J. W. Wilce, the grand old man of football at Ohio State, will relinquish the Scarlet and Gray football helm tomorrow after the Bucks play their last game of the season with Illinois at Urbana.

Doc Wilce, as he is known on the campus, has steered Ohio State teams to the championship of the Big Ten conference and he has seen them sink to the depths. The Bucks were enroute to Urbana this morning. They go through light signal practice this afternoon, then will rest for their game with the battling Illini.

EIGHT IN EAST GAME. The game will be the last for eight of State's outstanding gridmen and yesterday, before leaving, they and Coach Wilce made their traditional "last tackle."

Last tackle, while seemingly funny, nevertheless is an impressive ceremony—as impressive comparatively, as the swan song of some beloved national figure who is retiring into seclusion.

The retiring gridmen, line-up and one by one, with the battle cry of their alma mater ringing from their lips, they swoop down on the battered dummy used in practice. It is their "last tackle" and a farewell to football.

MIRACLE NEEDED. Ohio State, if a miracle occurs, will win the Big Ten championship tomorrow, but only a miracle can push them to the heights. Their best chance is to go into a two-way tie for second place.

They can win the title if Minnesota beats Wisconsin, Iowa loses to Michigan and the Bucks beat Illinois.

They can go into a tie if Minnesota beats Wisconsin, Iowa beats Michigan and the Bucks beat Illinois.

They would go into a four-way tie for the title if Minnesota beat Wisconsin, Iowa beat Michigan and the Bucks beat Illinois.

RIVAL BALL SNAPPERS

SPORTSMATTER

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Writer)

Jack Dempsey has gone back to California, leaving a not unreasonably interested sports world very much in the dark as to his future plans.

In justice to the former heavyweight champion, it now can be said with confidence that Jack has returned to his sport.

The answer to all the shilly-shallying which went on when Dempsey and Tex Rickard talked things over in New York last week is that the question of the champion's return to the ring is now a matter of ability rather than of desire.

When one considers the situation dispassionately, balances Jack's bank balance against the definite offer of nearly half a million dollars, observes Tex Rickard and hisling the weakest lot of heavyweight contenders in ring history, and realizes that "the spirit is willing," one comes to the inevitable conclusion that "the flesh is weak."

After sitting in a couple of conferences between Rickard and Dempsey, I became convinced that if Jack thought he could win his next bout, he would undertake it without hesitation.

Opinion of Basque. Just what the former title-holder's chances be against the opponent he would be called upon to meet? How would he stack up against Purdie Izardson, for instance? Dempsey does not rate the Illini very highly. He sat near me at the fight in Madison Square Garden earlier this month in which Purdie beat Otto Von Porat and expressed the opinion that the Norwegian was the better man and should have won.

Dempsey then went on to say that he thought Knute Hansen a better fighter than Von Porat, and that he believed George Godfrey could beat Hansen. Nearly every boxing man will agree with Dempsey's estimate of Godfrey. But the danger of the tall, lanky fighter being given a corner of the heavyweight title, at least in the opinion of one who has seen him, and you may hope so.

There is one probability in Dempsey's statement of Jack would be called upon to meet. The Basque was known to beat Those who have seen him, and the 240-pounder goes into a middle with Hansen, and even though he may be, Dempsey is the heavyweight to beat in the sport. It is kept an American possession. As a trial version of the new feature, Senior Undergrads is a necessary part of the world of the student body. For more information, contact the Student Body.

constantly in fighting trim, despite his indifferent performances, and it might be that Jack would be the trial horse for the Basque and be ridden to a fall.

In anything like his old form, Dempsey would make short work of the Basque. The one question is, can Jack return to anything like his old form? And the one answer is: "Emphatically, no."

From Rickard's viewpoint, and from the viewpoint of the paying public, the question of the condition and ability of the former champion is a matter of secondary consideration. The public wants to see Dempsey fight again, which means that Tex wants to introduce him again. But how does Jack himself feel about it? He has had a creditable career in the ring. No man ever won the hearts of the fans as Dempsey did. He has little liking for an inglorious anti-climax. He feels that the future may be safer for him with his health and reputation intact, whatever the strain upon his generous purse.

That is the real answer to all the hesitation about Jack Dempsey's return to the ring.

GRID'S STARS WILL MEET IN HARD CONTEST

Six Players, Touted As All-American Material, Will Oppose Prowess.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—All-American football stars will be moulded in the Carnegie Tech—New York university game at Forbes field, Pittsburgh, tomorrow afternoon.

Unless all signs fail at least two players, maybe three, will walk off the gridiron members of the mythical All-America football eleven of 1928.

Each team has three serious candidates for the all-America team, as follows:

Carnegie Tech: Capt. Howard Harpster, quarter; "Caracas" Karcis, fullback; Ted Rosenzweig, end. New York university: Capt. Al Lassman, tackle; Gallahad Grant, tackle; Kenneth Strong, halfback.

THREE ALMOST CERTAIN. No matter which team wins the game it will be hard to select an all-American team and leave off Harpster, Rosenzweig and Strong.

Head Coach Bob Waddell of Carnegie Tech rates Harpster as the greatest quarterback the Plaid ever had. Harpster is the key man of the Carnegie attack and can run, pass and kick. Besides he is a smart field general in a season which has produced few really great quarterbacks.

It was Rosenzweig who started the Notre Dame team to defeat last week. In the first minute of play he took a 20 yard pass from Harpster and ran 60 yards to Notre Dame's 10 yard line. In the second quarter, Rosenzweig scored a touchdown on an end-around play.

Kenneth Strong, N. Y. U.'s 190-pound halfback, has gained more ground than any other back in the country this season. He has picked off 1,689 yards in 8 games and has never been halted. He can kick, run and pass.

GAUDED GREATEST TACKLE. Chick Meehan, rates Al Lassman, the 210-pound giant, as the greatest tackle he has ever seen in all his playing and coaching experience. No team has been able to take Lassman out of a play this year.

Giant, who weighs 209 pounds, has played right up to Lassman's pace all season. It would be hard to find two better tackles on any team than Lassman and Grant. They have weight, speed, strength and everything that goes up to make a great lineman.

Many coaches rate Karcis, the 225-pound fullback, as the outstanding star of the Carnegie team. Jack Sutherland, Pittsburgh coach, considers Karcis the hardest running back he has seen this season.

ARMY WRATH MAY HIT NEBRASKA 11

Cadets to Seek Revenge From Cornhuskers For Defeat From Notre Dame.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The second mid-western threat to the peace of mind of what started out to be an unbeaten football eleven showed up on the plains of West Point today, when Nebraska's powerful football squad, 33 strong, arrived for a workout preliminary to tomorrow's intercollegiate game with Biff Jones' cadets.

Having received one rude setback at the hands of Notre Dame, the Cadets were in no mood to hold lightly these Cornhuskers who have swept aside all opposition this season aside from a scoreless tie with Pittsburgh last week.

Despite the known power of the invaders, however, the Army eleven is ready to take revenge upon the mid-west for its defeat by the Irish a fortnight ago. That defeat spoiled what promised to be a great season for the Cadets, who are engaged upon the hardest football schedule ever undertaken by a service team, or a college one, for that matter.

The Nebraska squad is impres-

Ohio State Can Win Title Only By Miracle

COACH WILCE IS READY FOR FINAL GAME

Eight Players and Mentor Make "Last Tackles" At Practice Ceremony.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—Dr. J. W. Wilce, the grand old man of football at Ohio State, will relinquish the Scarlet and Gray football helm tomorrow after the Bucks play their last game of the season with Illinois at Urbana.

Doc Wilce, as he is known on the campus, has steered Ohio State teams to the championship of the Big Ten conferences and he has seen them sink to the depths. The Bucks were enroute to Urbana this morning. They go through light signal practice this afternoon, then will rest for their game with the battling Illini.

EIGHT IN EAST GAME.
The game will be the last for eight of State's outstanding gridmen and yesterday, before leaving, they and Coach Wilce made their traditional "last tackle."

Last tackle, while seemingly funny, nevertheless is an impressive ceremony—as an impressive comparative, as the swan song of some beloved national figure who is retiring into seclusion.

The retiring gridmen line-up and one by one, with the battle cry of their alma mater ringing from their lips, they swoop down on the battered dummy used in practice. It is their "last tackle" and a farewell to football.

MIRACLE NEEDED.
Ohio State, if a miracle occurs, will win the Big Ten championship tomorrow, but only a miracle can push them to the heights. Their best chance is to go into a two-way tie for second place.

They can win the tiara if Minnesota beats Wisconsin, Iowa loses to Michigan and the Bucks beat Illinois.

They can go into a tie if Minnesota beats Wisconsin, Iowa beats Michigan and the Bucks beat Illinois.

They would go into a four-way tie for the title if Minnesota beat Wisconsin, Iowa tied Michigan and the Bucks tied Illinois.

LOANS UP TO $500

Another advantage in dealing with The City Loan is that you can always feel sure of having access to the newest improvements and latest developments in financing.

Here, you can get a loan with long terms and small payments and, in addition, be substantially rewarded for paying promptly. For every loan payment that is made "on time" you save ten per cent of the interest as a reward for your punctuality. It is a saving worth considering during the term of the average loan.

This is just another City Loan advancement for the good of its patrons. When better loans are made The City Loan will make them.

SPORTSMATTER

By FRANK GETTY (United Press Sports Writer)

Jack Dempsey has gone back to California, leaving a not unreasonably interested sports world very much in the dark as to his future plans.

In justice to the former heavyweight champion, it now can be said with authority that Jack himself is equally in the dark. The answer to all the shilly-shallying which went on when Dempsey and Tex Rickard talked things over in New York last week is that the question of the champion's return to the ring is based upon his ability rather than upon his desire.

When one considers the situation dispassionately, balances Jack's bank balance against the definite offer of nearly half a million dollars, observes Tex Rickard juggling the weakest lot of heavyweight contenders in ring history, and realizes that "the spirit is willing," one comes to the inevitable conclusion that "the flesh is weak."

After sitting in at a couple of conferences between Rickard and Dempsey, I became convinced that if Jack thought he could win his next fight, he would undertake it without hesitation.

Opinion of Basque

Just what the former title-holder's chances be against the opponent he would be called upon to meet? How would he stack up against Paulino Uzcudun, for instance? Dempsey does not rate the Basque very highly. He sat near me at the fight in Madison Square Garden earlier this month in which Paulino beat Otto Von Porat, and expressed the opinion that the Norwegian was the better man and should have won.

Dempsey then went on to say that he thought Knute Hansen a better fighter than Von Porat, and that he believed George Godfrey could beat Hansen. Nearly every boxing critic will agree with Dempsey's estimate of Godfrey. But there is no danger of the tall, lazy Ethiopian being given a chance at the heavyweight title, or any part of it. Godfrey is out, barred by his color, and you may lay to that.

Paulino would probably be Dempsey's opponent if Jack were to return to the ring. The Basque is a hard man to beat. Those gold teeth disappear behind the round, massive shoulders, and the good senior goes into a huddle with himself, when he is hurt. Awkward and dumb though he may be, Paulino is the heavyweight to beat if the supremacy of the heavyweight division is to be kept an American possession. As a trial horse for the big fellows, Senior Uzcudun fulfills a necessary role. He would be the logical trial horse for Jack Dempsey.

Long Lay-Off

But consider the fact that Dempsey has not fought for 14 months. (The last time he fought was in 1927.)

constantly in fighting trim, despite his indifferent performances, and it might be that Jack would be the trial horse for the Basque and be ridden to a fall.

In anything like his old form, Dempsey would make short work of the Basque. The one question is, can Jack return to anything like his old form? And the one answer is: "Emphatically, no!"

From Rickard's viewpoint, and from the viewpoint of the paying public, the question of the condition and ability of the former champion is a matter of secondary consideration. The public wants to see Dempsey fight again, which means that Tex wants to introduce him again. But how does Jack himself feel about it? He has had a creditable career in the ring. No man ever won the hearts of the fans as Dempsey did. He has little liking for an inglorious anti-climax. He feels that the future may be safer for him with his health and reputation intact, whatever the strain upon his generous purse.

That is the real answer to all the hesitation about Jack Dempsey's return to the ring.

It is estimated roughly that in the United States about 12,000 persons are engaged in our ocean fisheries. The catch totals annually almost 3,000,000,000 pounds of fish, and the fishermen receive from $105,000,000 to $110,000,000 for their labors.

DELAWARE, Nov. 23.—Gridiron history may be written here tomorrow when the Wittenberg Lutherans meet Ohio Wesleyan's Fighting Bishops.

If there is any history writing to do, Wittenberg must do it, otherwise, the clash between the teams will be just another football game.

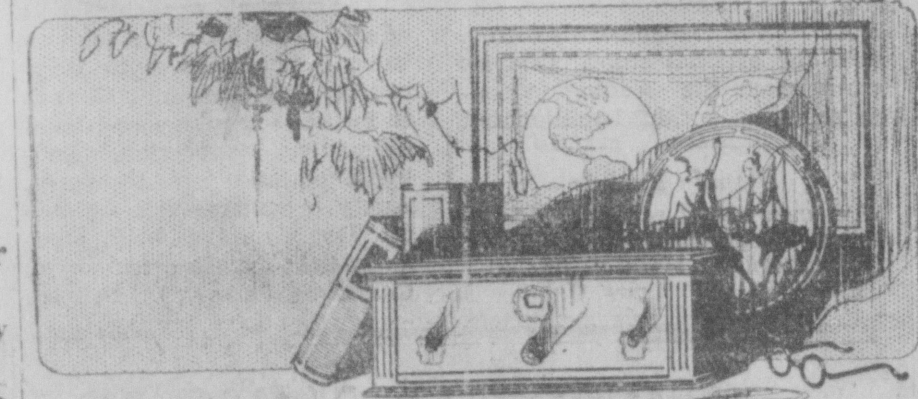

The Bishops, by virtue of their untarnished record, are leading the Buckeye Athletic Association percentage column, but the Lutherans who have lost one game, can tie them for the conference crown by beating them tomorrow.

GRID'S STARS WILL MEET IN HARD CONTEST

Six Players, Touted As All-American Material, Will Oppose Prowess.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—All-American football stars will be moulded in the Carnegie Tech—New York university game at Forbes field, Pittsburgh, tomorrow afternoon.

Unless all signs fail at least two players, maybe three, will walk off the gridiron members of the mythical all-America football eleven of 1928.

Each team has three serious candidates for the all-America team, as follows:

Carnegie Tech: Capt. Howard Harpster, quarter; "Carcass" Karcis, fullback; Ted Rosenzweig, end.

New York university: Capt. Al Lassman, tackle; Galloway Grant, tackle; Kenneth Strong, halfback.

THREE ALMOST CERTAIN.
No matter which team wins the game it will be hard to select an all-American team and leave off Harpster, Rosenzweig and Strong. Head Coach Bob Waddell of Carnegie Tech rates Harpster as the greatest quarterback the Plaid ever had. Harpster is the key man of the Carnegie attack and can run, pass and kick. Besides he is a smart field general in a season which has produced few really great quarterbacks.

It was Rosenzweig who started the Notre Dame team to defeat last week. In the first minute of play he took a 20 yard pass from Harpster and ran 60 yards to Notre Dame's 10 yard line. In the second quarter Rosenzweig scored a touchdown on an end around play.

Kid Strong, N. Y. U.'s 190-pound halfback, has gained more ground than any other back in the country this season. He has picked off 1,689 yards in 8 games and has never been "halted." He can kick, run and pass.

CARVED GREATEST TACKLE.
Chuck Meehan, rates Al Lassman, the 210-pound giant, as the greatest tackle he has ever seen in all his playing and coaching experience. No team has been able to take Lassman out of a play this year.

Grant, who weighs 209 pounds, has played right up to Lassman's pace all season. It would be hard to find two better tackles on any team than Lassman and Grant. They have weight, speed, strength and everything that goes up to make a great lineman.

Many coaches rate Karcis, the 225-pound fullback, as the outstanding star of the Carnegie team. Jack Sutherland, Pittsburgh coach, considers Karcis the hardest running back he has seen this season.

ARMY WRATH MAY HIT NEBRASKA 11

Cadets to Seek Revenge From Cornhuskers For Defeat From Notre Dame.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The second mid-western threat to the peace of mind of what started out to be an unbeaten football eleven showed up on the plains of West Point today, when Nebraska's powerful football squad, 33 strong, arrived for a workout preliminary to tomorrow's intersectional game with Biff Jones' cadets.

Having received one rude setback at the hands of Notre Dame, the Cadets were in no mood to hold lightly these Cornhuskers who have swept aside all opposition this season aside from a scoreless tie with Pittsburgh last week.

Despite the known power of the invaders, however, the Army eleven is ready to take revenge upon the mid-west for its defeat by the Irish a fortnight ago. That defeat spoiled what promised to be a great season for the Cadets, who are engaged upon the hardest football schedule ever undertaken by a service team, or a college one, for that matter.

The Nebraska squad is impres-

Ever hear of such a thing before in a five-cent cigar? No bitter under-ripe nor flat-tasting over-ripe leaves. No short ends to crumble in your mouth. But long, fully-ripe leaves—all so chock-full of fragrance and pure, mellow-mild flavor. Fine Program Is Presented For Fathers and Sons

A very happy event was the Father and Son banquet given Thursday evening at the United Brethren community house by the Otterbein Brotherhood. Nearly 100 "Lads and Dads" sat down to a delicious chicken supper, prepared by some of the members of the Ladies Aid society. The tables were a pretty sight with their trimmings of yellow and white and each adorned by a graceful cluster of ferns.

At the conclusion of the meal, Mr. E. S. Neuding, the toastmaster for the evening cleverly introduced Rev. E. C. Peters, as song leader. The ice was soon broken after some peppy songs were sung, and a very enjoyable program followed.

Montfort Kirkwood Sr., gave a reading, "A Persimmon Festsomist," modeled upon the first Psalm. Mr. Neuding in his clever, humorous way introduced Judge E. A. Brown, who responded on the subject; "Dads and Lads." He gave a tender tribute to boy's best friend, his mother, and spoke of the responsibility of fatherhood. "We should be careful to set good examples, live pure Christian lives to rear up boys that our community will be proud of," he said.

A paper, "What I expect of my Dad" was prepared and read by Tom White. The male quartet composed of James Trimmer, Ross Kirkpatrick, Loren Peters, and Harry Kraft, were introduced and after Mr. Kraft was excused on account of illness, his place was substituted by Rev. Peters, who favored the audience with a sacred number. They responded to a rousing encore with a humorous song, "Lucky Jim," which brought down the house. They had to come back the third time and sang "The William Goat," which was just about as funny as the other one. When the crowd had subdued somewhat Rev. Welch gave a reading, "Wanted—Men," and Charles Kirkpatrick read "A Father's Ten Commandments." A very realistic recitation, "My Pa," was given by Glenn Stevenson.

This was followed by other readings by Rockford Brown, Monroe White, Earl Millhorns and another recitation, "Daddy," by James Groce.

After some "Stand Up" and "Sit Down," introductions the quartet again sang a sacred selection, "I Want My Life to Tell for Jesus." Again they were called back and sang some humorous selections, one "Who is Who in Circleville," that brought several guests prominently into the limelight.

The speaker of the evening Rev. Jerry Spears, of Columbus, was called upon and gave a fine address. Among other things he said: "It was a pleasure to meet with the Dads and Lads. Boys have clear eyes, be careful how you live before them they see all and tell all. Boys are practical, logical, religion to them is the unfolding of life. Let's see to it that it is unfolded to them in the right way. Give them a square deal. Well bred, well fed, well wed, Religion is life. It should function in contact with humanity. The world faces not so much the boy problem as the daddy problem. It is good to get together to laugh, to sing, to fellowship. Let's speak to each other and know each other as we go down life's pathway. Fellowship makes the path so much smoother and sweeter." These are some of the fine points from the speaker's splendid address.

The president, Mr. Sam Grant, gave a few remarks after which "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was sung followed by the benediction by Rev. L. W. Green.

PROF. WARREN SPEAKS AT D. A. R. MEETING

Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. George P. Foresman, Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, with the vice regent, Mrs. Orion King, presiding.

The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the Salute to the Flag. Twenty-seven members responded to the roll call. During a short business session, Mrs. Lee Shaner, chairman of Ellis Island Relief, reported that she is making plans for sending a Christmas box to Ellis Island and asked for supplies from the members. It was announced that a card party would be held Friday, Dec. 7th, at the home of Mrs. Bryce Briggs on N. Court-st.

The society felt greatly honored by having with them Prof. M. C. Warren, county superintendent of schools, who gave an address, which was greatly appreciated by those present. In part, he said: "We are here to keep in memory the achievements of our worthy ancestors, of the days when they were fighting for our liberties. We are here to venerate the heroes who have contributed to the freedom we now enjoy. We are here to show our love and admiration for the men of a past generation who guaranteed to us the great truths laid down in the Declaration of Independence."

"In the past 152 years, we have grown from a little strip along the Atlantic ocean to an enlarged nation, stretching from ocean to ocean, with a population almost 40 times what it was then. In that same time, we have come out an undivided nation, living under the supreme blessings of life, liberty and the pursuits of happiness."

"There are a few dangers of major importance confronting us. One of the dangers is ignorance, but the public school is instituted to combat that danger. Irreverence is the second danger. The only institution to combat that danger is the church. The third danger is disregard for law and the only institution to combat that danger is the courts. The fourth danger is the tendency towards idleness. To combat this great danger there is no institution for that purpose, but unless we shall turn our hands more to the plow, the shuttle, and the loom, we are in for some troubles not easily settled."

"Our hope of safety lies in our adherence to our ideals. Ideals held and maintained in the days of the Revolution and since."

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants, Miss Wittich, Mrs. Bryce Briggs and Mrs. Frank Bennett. The next meeting will be held Dec. 18, at 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, hostess.

The Business and Professional Women's club celebrated its fifth birthday anniversary with a dinner at the club room Thursday evening. At 6:30 o'clock, the four long candle lighted tables were filled with the club members and their guests. The main table at which were seated the speakers of the evening, Miss Jean Cavers, business manager of the Columbus School for Girls, the club president, Mrs. H. G. Stevenson, educational chairman, Miss Mary Wilder and the five guests, had for its center decoration the birthday cake with five lighted candles.

A most delicious dinner was served by Miss Charlotte Phelps, general chairman and the regular social committee. Miss Hilda Burns, chairman, Mrs. Harp Van Riper, Mrs. Carrie Patton, Miss Bess Warner and Miss Mary Howard. At the end of the dinner, the trio, Mrs. Mary Morris, Mrs. Anna Foresman and Miss Helen Rowe, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. William Fitzpatrick, sang a group of songs, very charmingly.

Then to the delight of all present, Mr. Robert L. Brehmer, showed his motion pictures of the Pumpkin Show and some of the audience had the privilege of seeing themselves as others see them. The pictures are splendidly real and it was a rare treat and one most thoroughly appreciated by all.

At this time, Miss Cavers, who is state educational chairman was introduced and gave a talk telling how different clubs carry out their educational work. She commended the idea of giving a banquet for the girl graduates, which is an established custom of the Circleville club. She also told of the girls who are being helped by the Florence Allen Scholarship fund to which this club is a contributor. This talk concluded the evening and another club party has become only a pleasant memory.

Mr. Neuding in his clever, humorous way introduced Judge E. A. Brown, who responded on the subject, "Dads and Lads." He gave a tender tribute to boy's best friend, his mother, and spoke of the responsibility of fatherhood. "We should be careful to set good examples, live pure Christian lives to rear up boys that our community will be proud of," he said.

A paper, "What I expect of my Dad" was prepared and read by Tom White.

The male quartet composed of James Trimmer, Ross Kirkpatrick, Loren Peters, and Harry Kraft, were introduced and after Mr. Kraft was excused on account of illness, his place was substituted by Rev. Peters, who favored the audience with a sacred number. They responded to a rousing encore with a humorous song, "Lucky Jim," which brought down the house. They had to come back the third time and sang "The William Goat," which was just about as funny as the other one. When the crowd had subdued somewhat Rev. Welch gave a reading, "Wanted—Men," and Charles Kirkpatrick read "A Father's Ten Commandments." A very realistic recitation, "My Pa," was given by Bienn Stevenson.

This was followed by other readings by Rockford Brown, Monroe White, Earl Millrons and another recitation, "Daddy," by James Groce.

After some "Stand Up" and "Sit Down," introductions the quartet again sang a sacred selection, "I Want My Life to Tell for Jesus."

Again they were called back and sang some humorous selections, one "Who is Who in Circleville?" that brought several guests prominently into the limelight.

The speaker of the evening Rev. Jerry Spears, of Columbus, was called upon and gave a fine address. Among other things he said: "It was a pleasure to meet with the Dads and Lads. Boys have clear eyes, be careful how you live before them they see all and tell all. Boys are practical, logical, religion to them is the unfolding of life. Let's see to it that it is unfolded to them in the right way. Give them a square deal. Well bred, well fed, well wed. Religion is life. It should function in contact with humanity. The world faces not so much the boy problem as the daddy problem."

It is good to get together to laugh, to sing, to fellowship. Let's speak to each other and know each other as we go down life's pathway. Fellowship makes the path so much smoother and sweeter." These are some of the fine points from the speaker's splendid address.

The president, Mr. Sam Grant, gave a few remarks after which "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was sung followed by the benediction by Rev. L. W. Green.

The only out of town guest present was Mrs. Joseph C. Ellis, of Lorain, O., sister of the hostess who assisted at the luncheon.

PROF. WARREN SPEAKS AT D. A. R. MEETING

Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. George P. Foresman, Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, with the vice regent, Mrs. Orion King, presiding.

The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the Salute to the Flag. Twenty-seven members responded to the roll call. During a short business session, Mrs. Lee Shaner, chairman of Ellis Island Relief, reported that she is making plans for sending a Christmas box to Ellis Island and asked for supplies from the members. It was announced that a card party would be held Friday, Dec. 7th, at the home of Mrs. Byrce Briggs on N. Court-st.

The society felt greatly honored by having with them Prof. M. C. Warren, county superintendent of schools, who gave an address, which was greatly appreciated by those present. In part, he said: "We are here to keep in memory the achievements of our worthy ancestors, of the days when they were fighting for our liberties. We are here to venerate the heroes who have contributed to the freedom we now enjoy. We are here to show our love and admiration for the men of a past generation who guaranteed to us the great truths laid down in the Declaration of Independence."

"In the past 152 years, we have grown from a little strip along the Atlantic ocean to an enlarged nation, stretching from ocean to ocean, with a population almost 40 times what it was then. In that same time, we have come out an undivided nation, living under the supreme blessings of life, liberty and the pursuits of happiness."

"There are a few dangers of major importance confronting us. One of the dangers is ignorance, but the public school is instituted to combat that danger. Irreverence is the second danger. The only institution to combat that danger is the church. The third danger is disregard for law and the only institution to combat that danger is the courts. The fourth danger is the tendency towards idleness. To combat this great danger there is no institution for that purpose, but unless we shall turn our hands more to the plow, the shuttle, and the loom, we are in for some troubles not easily settled."

"Our hope of safety lies in our adherence to our ideals. Ideals held and maintained in the days of the Revolution and since."

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants, Miss Wittich, Mrs. Bryce Briggs and Mrs. Frank Bennett. The next meeting will be held Dec. 18, at 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, hostess.

B. P. W. C. CELEBRATES FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

The Business and Professional Women's club celebrated its fifth birthday anniversary with a dinner at the club room Thursday evening. At 6:30 o'clock, the four long candle lighted tables were filled with the club members and their guests. The main table at which were seated the speakers of the evening, Miss Jean Cavers, business manager of the Columbus School for Girls, the club president, Mrs. H. G. Stevenson, educational chairman, Miss Mary Wilder and the five guests, had for its center decoration the birthday cake with five lighted candles.

A most delicious dinner was served by Miss Charlotte Phelps, general chairman and the regular social committee. Miss Hilda Burns, chairman, Mrs. Harp Van Riper, Mrs. Carrie Patton, Miss Bess Warner and Miss Mary Howard. At the end of the dinner, the trio, Mrs. Mary Morris, Mrs. Anna Foresman and Miss Helen Rowe, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. William Fitzpatrick, sang a group of songs, very charmingly.

Then to the delight of all present, Mr. Robert L. Brehmer, showed his motion pictures of the Pumpkin Show and some of the audience had the privilege of seeing themselves as others see them. The pictures are splendidly real and it was a rare treat and one most thoroughly appreciated by all.

At this time, Miss Cavers, who is state educational chairman was introduced and gave a talk telling how different clubs carry out their educational work. She commended the idea of giving a banquet for the girl graduates, which is an established custom of the Circleville club. She also told of the girls who are being helped by the Florence Allen Scholarship fund to which this club is a contributor.

This talk concluded the evening and another club party has become only a pleasant memory.
